

What to say in a small store.

At the checkout

Store clerk - ¿Sería todo?

Customer - ¿Me das unos chicles, porfa?

Store clerk - ¿De cuáles?

Customer - Los de menta, por favor.

Store clerk - ¿Algo más?

Customer - Eso sería todo, gracias.

Store clerk - ¿Encontraste todo lo que necesitabas?

Customer - Sí, gracias. ¿Cuánto debo?

Store clerk - Son doscientos treinta pesos en total.

Customer - ¿Tienes pago con tarjeta?

Store clerk - Sí. Digita tu pin, por favor.

Customer - Listo, gracias.

Store clerk - ¿Requieres tu ticket?

Customer - No, así está bien, gracias.

Store clerk - ¿Traes bolsa o quieres comprar una?

Customer - Ah, sí, dame una, por favor.

Store clerk - Listo, aquí tienes.

Customer - Gracias.

Store clerk - A ti, hasta luego.

Customer - Que te vaya bien.

Glossary

¿Sería todo? - Is that everything?

¿De cuáles? - This means 'which ones' or 'which kind' and it's basically used to ask which specific type of something the customer wants.

There are normally LOADS of different types of chewing gum, for example, so the store clerk's gonna need you to specify. I mean, how's he to know that the only gum you buy is cherry flavored Hubba Bubba!

¿Algo más? - Anything else?

Eso sería todo. - That's everything. / That's all.

¿Encontraste todo lo que necesitabas? - Did you find everything you needed?

¿Cuánto te debo? / ¿Cuánto debo? - This is the Spanish equivalent of 'How much do I owe you?'; it can be used in much the same way as the English.

¿Tienes pago con tarjeta? - This is my favorite way of asking if a store accepts card payments.

Digita tu pin, por favor. - Enter your pin, please.

¿Requieres tu ticket? – Say hello to the Spanish equivalent of 'Would you like a receipt?'; 'un ticket' is the most common word for a receipt in Mexico, but you might also hear it being referred to as a 'voucher'.

And, yep, a 'voucher' is yet another anglicism... there might be a bit of a pattern emerging here 😊

No, así está bien. – No, it's fine.

Aquí tienes. – This just means 'here you go' (i.e., what you'd say when handing someone something).

Hasta luego. – See you later. / See you. / Bye.

Que te vaya bien. = Take care. / Have a good one.

GAP FILL

Store clerk - ¿Sería?

Customer - Sí, ¿tienes con tarjeta?

Store clerk - Claro, ¿. tu ticket?

Customer - No, gracias.

Store clerk - Listo, que te bien.

Customer - Hasta luego

MISSING WORDS

pago / requieres / vaya / todo

ANSWERS + TRANSLATIONS

Store clerk - ¿Sería TODO?

Customer - Sí, ¿tienes PAGO con tarjeta?

Store clerk - Claro, ¿REQUIERES tu ticket?

Customer - No, gracias.

Store clerk - Listo, que te VAYA bien.

Customer - Hasta luego

At the checkout

Store clerk - Is that everything?

Customer - Can I get some gum, please?

Store clerk - Which kind?

Customer - The mint ones, please.

Store clerk - Anything else?

Customer - That's all, thanks.

Store clerk - Did you find everything you needed?

Customer - Yes, thanks. How much is it?

Store clerk - That'll be two hundred and thirty pesos.

Customer - Do you take card?

Store clerk - Yes. Enter your PIN, please.

Customer - Done, thanks.

Store clerk - Would you like a receipt?

Customer - No, that's fine, thanks.

Store clerk - Do you have a bag, or would you like to buy one?

Customer - Oh, yes, I'll grab a bag, please.

Store clerk - Here you go.

Customer - Thanks.

Store clerk - No problem, see you.

Customer - Take care.